K1N ---> The first helicopter flight from Jamaica to Navassa landed three operators and infrastructure materials during the local afternoon on 31 January. Flights resumed at sunrise and K1N has been QRV since 23:14 UTC on 1 February. After the whole team arrived, K1N expected to go "to full DXpedition mode" with seven stations at 00.00 UTC on 5 February. Reported band/mode errors in the uploaded logs have been fixed: "the on-island logs are complete and safe and we think that Club Log accurately reflects them now", the team reported on 6 February at 04.39 UTC, so "if you don't see your Qs by this time tomorrow, it's probably best to work us again". The latest statistics (6 February at 02.44 UTC) show 40556 QSOs (73,5 % NA and 19,3 % EU) with 14299 unique callsigns. K1N should be QRV until around 14 February. The operation has been already approved for DXCC credit. Updates and pictures can be found at www.navassadx.com.

THE DQRM TRACKING PROJECT ---> Recently, the amount and intensity of DQRM (Deliberate QRM) has been growing logarithmically, targeting DXpeditions all over the world. DQRMers attempt to spoil communications and disrupt the joy of chasing DX. Without going into the motivation of DQRMers, the DX Community is taking steps to eliminate this practice. The KP1-5 Project, which is producing the 2015 K1N Navassa DXpedition, has been working with tele-communications agencies around the world. The objective is to identify stations who are acting as DQRMers and use legal means to stop this behaviour. The technology is in hand to solve this problem and, with your assistance, we can stop this blight that is hurting hams worldwide.

HOW IT WORKS: Locating the stations engaging in DQRM is a matter of triangulation. When the DQRMer is 60db over S9 at your location, you can be pretty sure that station is nearby. If you fill out the form at www.dqrmreport.com, the data will be collected and analyzed to produce a reasonably accurate map of the DQRMer's location. This data will allow a close-in search in the DQRMer's area and, using local transmitter hunting devices, the offender will be identified. This is a real-time system that's been in development for several years; its first major test will be the 2015 K1N Navassa DXpedition.

WHAT YOU DO: Fill out the form with as much information as you can provide. All information will remain confidential. The form will go into a database and the DQRM Project software will do the rest. We can stop DQRM - and you can help!

YB3MM/8 ---> Adhi, YB3MM reports that his recent activity from IOTA group OC-247 took place from four different islands: Sailusa Besar (aka Sailus, from 28 January until 2 UTC on the 29th), Satanger (from 6 UTC on 29 January until 2 UTC on the 30th), Kapoposang (6-17.30 UTC on 30 January) and Sailusa Kecil (aka Poleonro, from 22 UTC on 30 January until 00 UTC on the 31st).

+ SILENT KEY + Rinaldo Cavagnero, I1CAW passed away on 3 February. His interests ranged from 80m to 10 GHz; a DXer for many decades, he had total of 356 Entities confirmed in the DXCC Phone standings and was one of the doyens of IOTA chasing in Italy.
